ESCAPE OF A DESPERADO.

Deputy Sheriffs Tricked by a Dummy Made out of a Pillow and Blanket. John C. Turlington, the noted desperdo, who has been confined at Booneville, Mo., in the county jail, for the past six months, effected his escape Satrdsy night is a clever manner. After be guards gave him his supper it has een their custom to allow him the freetom of the jail for the purpose of exercise until 8 o'clock. Deputy Sheriff Nicholson took him his supper at 6 c'clock, and left his cell open to that he might have his usual exerse. As soon as he was left alone the desperado rigged out a dummy with the ow and blanket from his bed, and an I shirt. He placed the dummy in the bed, so that it would appear to be lying filled with indignant men and women with its back o the door. He placed and excitement runs high against the his suppor disses outside the door and arranged the cell for the night in its Co. bankers. The members of the comusual way, and proceeded to the room pled by Deputy Sheriffs Nichelson and Garretson. There he hid him belf under the bed and awaited a favorable opportunity to make his escape, which presented itself when the two deputies went into the dining-room.

Mr. Dalamater makes a frank acknowledgement that he is unable to do two deputies went into the dining-room.

A N-w York Woman's Puse.

The other night a woman in a house on Broadway flung open the window and indulged in piereing cries of "Murder!" This caused about a thousand people to congregrate in the street, and policeman upon investigation found that a wife had been yelling "Murder!" because her husband was in the habit of leaving her alone every night and she was afraid to be alone. This is a new dodge for keeping pleasure-seeking husbands at home, and if acted upon energetically will tend to reduce club membership not a little. A Remarkable Old Woman.

One of the most remarkable old women in Maine is living on the island of Monhegan. Although only seventy-five years old she not only knows nothing I the cars, telephone, electric light, etc., but has never seen a horse. She bus always lived on the island several miles from the mainland, and her world has been Monhegan. Sheep and cows are kept on the island, but there is no asil for horses. To Die December.
